MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR:
DR. ALISON BIANCHI
THE UNIVERSITY OF IOWA

Dear RC42 Members,

I hope this message finds you well!

It's been a long time since I wrote to you all — I had a very difficult two years related to the global pandemic, as you all have experienced as well. My beloved father died of COVID-19 during the first wave — I share this with you all not for sympathy, but for sympatico, as I know so many of you have lost loved ones.

However, I know that my Dad would want me to carry on and do well, and so I now am putting my energies into many comebacks, including the revival of our wonderful RC42!

In this Newsletter, we feature our terrific members and call for some help! We have a wonderfully active member, Juan Carlos Castillo, who will run for President of the RC42 for the next four years. Now, we need some more interested people to run for the other officers, specifically Secretary/Treasurer and two Board Members.

Also — we need to get our membership up! So, if you know anyone interested in joining our RC42, please encourage them to do so!!!

Won't you help us out? It's such a great way to meet other social psychologists and make important connections!

Let me know (alison-bianchi@uiowa.edu), and our next newsletter, for June 2023, will feature important information about the upcoming World Congress!!

Truly yours,

Alison Bianchi

Memory and resistance: mournful lives in women victims of human rights violations as actors of society.

Political violence and human rights violations have a long history in Latin America. A distinctive gender-related element emerges in women bereaved by losing a significant other due to this violence. Throughout the continent, women are mobilizing through collective actions and social movements to make these victims and this violence visible and to resist forgetting these lost lives. In this context, "mourning activism" is a way for these women to demand the recognition of the value of these lives lost or threatened due to human rights violations, while at the same time asserting themselves as actors in their society.

The main objective of this project is to study duels from a gender perspective to make visible the fundamental elements of the forms of subjection that arise from the work of the duel between women due to political violence.

This project, coordinated by Karla Henriquez (UCLouvain), brings together sociologists and social psychologists based in Belgium and Chile to understand better the personal and collective dimensions of these actors, who have played a crucial role in the recent history of Latin America and are today among the few actors who are rising in the face of widespread violence in some countries in the region.
